

Video transcript

Feeding reptiles

Okay, so feeding's part of obviously keeping reptiles and feeding snakes is a little bit different than feeding lizards. Now, best thing when feeding a snake is to use a hook, it's an extra arm for you. It allows you to get that little bit further into a tank without getting bitten. I feed my snakes in a separate feeding container. It's better than feeding them inside the enclosure because then they associate anything going into the enclosure as food. So, it separates the enclosure and their feeding. So, let's get one out. Right, Lauren do you want to bring that rat over? And just hold him in front of his head.

Very important with keeping reptiles that you make sure you get the adequate food sources that they need. Having lizards obviously requires certain things such as different crickets, insects, cockroaches. Also different vegetables and fruit supplies. You can get them from either your local pet stores or also vegetables from your local supermarket. Snakes on the other hand tend to need dead rats. Now, these you get from your local pet store as well and it's important that you don't give them live mice or rats.