

Video transcript

Handling reptiles

Keeping reptiles in the classroom comes with a few things that you need to think of. Now, firstly when you first get it to your classroom, of course the kids are going to be excited. They're all wanting to want to have a hold. They're all going to want to come up and tap the glass. It's really important that you maintain the animal's well-being and make sure that if the kids are going to hold it, they use proper handling techniques and support the animals at all time. The key to this is minimising stress. Distressed animals and you're not going to have a happy reptile.