<td>Learners at the beginning of this phase are new to the sounds of English. In this phase, they begin to attend to the sounds of English and identify individual words, phrases, tones and inflections.</td>
<td>Learners at the beginning of this phase distinguish spoken English from other languages and dialects (i.e. on hearing English, they attempt to respond in English), they pay attention to the speaker and acknowledge being spoken to. In this phase, they begin to take a more active role in communication, such as seeking clarification when meaning is unclear.</td>
<td>Learners at the beginning of this phase understand spoken English used to talk about familiar and some unfamiliar topics. In this phase, they begin to follow the main ideas in extended talk and discussions, and identify relevant information from subject-specific talk.</td>

<tr>
<td>☐ respond appropriately to clear commands (e.g. Make two lines), when others are doing the same</td>
<td>☐ follow simple instructions or directions where the context is obvious and recognise familiar words in spoken texts</td>
<td>☐ understand teacher questions and can relay messages</td>
<td>☐ understand most spoken and audiovisual texts, and can identify specific information if questions are given beforehand</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>☐ identify some known vocabulary as single words and sometimes in a sentence sequence of sounds when the known word is stressed (e.g. Give me your book)</td>
<td>☐ demonstrate understanding of short spoken texts, especially those containing known words and phrases, and respond appropriately to familiar formulaic utterances (e.g. Time to pack up now)</td>
<td>☐ understand instructions, recounts and explanations when supported by clear contexts</td>
<td>☐ are beginning to use some cultural expectations when listening to English (e.g. eye contact, distance, gesture)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>☐ are becoming aware of expected listening behaviour in the classroom</td>
<td>☐ engage in face-to-face interactions, responding to key words and phrases</td>
<td>☐ give relevant details of spoken texts listened to, such as retelling a sequence of events</td>
<td>☐ understand the main points of small amounts of non-literal and generalised information when appropriate background is given</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>☐ rely on gestures and visual images to access meanings in texts listened to and read aloud</td>
<td>☐ demonstrate appropriate listening behaviours such as paying attention and looking at the speaker</td>
<td>☐ respond to different registers appropriately (e.g. match a formal response to a formal request)</td>
<td>☐ respond to different registers and understand the importance of listening for different purposes</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>☐ understand a narrow range of action verbs (e.g. sit, run, kick, sing)</td>
<td>☐ participate in group learning activities such as games, rhymes and songs, joining in appropriately</td>

<td>Learners at the beginning of this phase communicate using gesture, isolated words and well-known, formulaic expressions. In this phase, they begin to communicate verbally and nonverbally in familiar social and classroom situations.</td>
<td>Learners at the beginning of this phase communicate verbally and nonverbally with some success in familiar situations. In this phase, they communicate with less reliance on formulaic expressions in routine social and classroom situations, attempting to modify their English in response to a range of familiar classroom and social purposes.</td>
<td>Learners at the beginning of this phase communicate and learn through English in predictable social and learning situations. In this phase, they develop independence in selecting and using a small range of English features, while still relying on others to restate or suggest vocabulary and sentence structure.</td>
<td>Learners at the beginning of this phase communicate effectively in most situations. In this phase, they begin to communicate confidently with peers and familiar adults in informal contexts, use appropriate registers for different situations and functions, and an appropriate register when speaking to adults.</td>

- Students:
  - sometimes join in oral activities involving songs and rhymes
  - begin to express needs and respond to simple directions and questions using single words or nonverbal responses such as shrugs
  - distinguish between spoken English and first language/dialect
  - use a limited range of concrete home and school vocabulary that is high frequency
  - exhibit beginning understanding of word order in simple phrases and sentences
  - pronounce some English words and phrases so that they can be understood
  - watch, listen, imitate and repeat words and phrases, and rely on the English speaker to support and interpret their utterances.

- Students:
  - use formulas, well-rehearsed and common sentence patterns, and short, simple telegraphic utterances to make basic requests, express basic needs and to contribute some relatively complex ideas, usually about concrete subject matter
  - use speaking behaviours from first language to communicate and predict meaning of some unfamiliar spoken texts by using their first language culture and personal experiences
  - use vocabulary that is mainly everyday, but begin to use some technical vocabulary when talking about topics more technically (eg animals, weather)
  - use utterances with varying degrees of grammatical accuracy
  - demonstrate limited control of primary tenses (past, present, future), simple linking conjunctions (and, but) and a small range of pronouns
  - use comprehensible pronunciation and attempt to approximate English stress and intonation
  - rely on an attentive interlocutor who is prepared to fill in gaps and predict meaning
  - make use, when available, of first language speakers to provide words, clarification and translation
  - imitate oral language conventions, such as taking turns and speaking at a volume suited to the situation.

- Students:
  - initiate and participate in casual exchanges with English-speaking peers, and contribute information and express ideas in group tasks and classroom discussions using politeness conventions
  - recount news (giving details involving where, when, who and what in a time sequence) and can give a short prepared talk on a familiar topic
  - use an expanding range of common, everyday vocabulary with confidence and a limited range of technical vocabulary for operating in the curriculum
  - begin to use some colloquial language
  - use basic English features including intonation, and combine and manipulate learned speech patterns, although errors are still apparent (eg I don’t know where is it)
  - identify and describe people, places and things using simple vocabulary, and use basic time markers, common prepositions, some common contractions and simple negative forms
  - choose linking conjunctions (eg and, then, but, or, so) to form compound sentences and a small range of conjunctions (eg because, when, before, after) to form complex sentences
  - use pronunciation that increasingly approximates the English they hear around them, discarding first language features in their pronunciation
  - speak with greater fluency and fewer hesitations, structuring utterances through appropriate word order
  - use SAE dictionaries
  - rehearse oral productions.

<td>Learners at the beginning of this phase understand that print transmits and records ideas and events, although they may have had little or no previous experience with print texts in English. In this phase, they begin to decode short texts and correctly interpret the literal information in visual texts with teacher scaffolding.</td>
<td>Learners at this phase are beginning to understand that print and images transmit and record ideas and events. They have had little or no previous experience with print texts.</td>
<td>Learners at the beginning of this phase decode texts with varying success and begin to recognise some common subject-specific words. As they reach the end of this phase, they are beginning to read independently and understand that texts may have different communicative purposes, and that these purposes may be the same or different from texts they have experienced in their first language.</td>
<td>Learners at the beginning of this phase understand the purpose of most texts and are beginning to understand the gist of most class texts independently. In this phase, they independently read and understand a range of more complex and lengthy texts with predictable structures and familiar vocabulary, but they continue to rely on illustrations to construct meaning.</td>
<td>Learners at the beginning of this phase are beginning to apply learned reading strategies and their knowledge of English to make some sense of unfamiliar text. In this phase, they independently read and understand a range of familiar and unfamiliar imaginative, informative and electronic media texts, and use key organisational and language features to interpret these texts.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Students:
- show interest in gaining and sharing meaning from print and pictures
- may show comprehension of texts through the construction of diagrams or images
- can differentiate between first language print and English print
- bring their previous cultural and linguistic experiences to the task of reading in order to make sense of print
- need scaffolding to interpret images
- that are culturally specific or unfamiliar to them
- recognise the difference between letters, numerals and illustrations
- are learning the basic features of English print, including left-to-right directionality, spaces between words and return sweep
- are beginning to understand some sound–symbol relationships of English
- read along with the teacher (or slightly behind), using the teacher’s intonation and phrasing, and use memory and picture cues to reread familiar texts such as rhymes and repetitive texts
- recognise their own name in writing
- begin to develop a small bank of common sight words.

Students:
- begin to understand the sound–symbol relationship in English and how to sound out short, phonically decodable words
- begin to understand the directionality of English print and trace under words with their finger or a pen to demonstrate this
- begin to understand elements of books – the cover, the title, the pages and the way these are turned
- use their home language to describe a visual image in general terms and attempt to infer the general meaning of this image
- attempt to follow the gist of a plot in film or television by interpreting the body language and action they see on the screen
- may have beginning awareness of information and communication technologies (ICT) and their use in learning in a school.

Students:
- attend to texts read aloud, following the print and understanding some of the main ideas
- bring their previous cultural and linguistic experiences to the task of reading in order to make sense of print
- differentiate between first language print and English print, and follow English print conventions of reading
- left to right and top to bottom
- read familiar print around the classroom such as posters and signs, and accurately read back their own writing
- interpret texts at a literal level
- have a foundational knowledge of predictable English sound–symbol relationships and some common letter patterns (graphemes)
- can differentiate between informative and imaginative texts
- read short texts with predictable structures and everyday language, and reread more complex, well-known texts using appropriate pauses and intonation
- benefit greatly from the use of first language with peers and teachers’ assistants
- use graphophonic knowledge to attempt pronouncing new words
- choose books to look at and read, decoding the print by using the illustrations to assist meaning.

Students:
- understand and enjoy texts read aloud, identifying characters and retelling sequences of events
- identify the main idea in a paragraph or text, find specific information and make some inferences based on their prior knowledge
- continue to use first language, culture and experiences, when given the opportunity, to compare and contrast text types and meanings, and thus enhance their comprehension and cognitive abilities in both languages
- identify some unfamiliar cultural references
- use a range of strategies for working out words and their meanings, including their developing knowledge of everyday and specialist vocabulary and their knowledge of sentence structure and sound–letter relationships
- use appropriate intonation when reading statements, questions and dialogue
- Can read many irregular words and can recognise and read more complex, but still common, letter patterns (eg -ion). When instructed, can recognise common suffixes and prefixes, and use these to construct meaning (eg -ed for past tense of regular verbs)
- use their growing oral language to extend their reading and understand how to use morphemes to identify word meaning (eg big in bigger and biggest)
- use a growing range of strategies to extend their reading, such as adjusting their reading rate according to the task, skimming, scanning and reading on.

Students:
- read a range of texts, including imaginative literary texts and informative texts (eg longer, more complex illustrated sequential explanations, such as life cycles and flow charts)
- participate in class and group discussions to interpret texts, giving their own opinion and comparing it with those of others
- identify the purpose and intended audience of texts
- identify main ideas and specific information in texts, and demonstrate understanding of the storyline when retelling, paraphrasing and answering questions
- find specific information or detail from informative texts to answer ‘how’ or ‘why’ questions, and draw conclusions and make decisions based on information gained from different sources
- continue to use first language, culture and experiences, when given the opportunity, in order to compare and contrast text types and meanings, and thus enhance their comprehension and cognitive abilities in both languages
- use knowledge of grammar to decode complex sentences and reread texts to confirm details if the information is incompletely understood
- apply and integrate strategies to comprehend and learn at the text, sentence and word level, including using illustrations, prior knowledge and making inferences with scaffolding.

<td>Learners at the beginning of this phase are new to written English, although they have some experience with writing in another language. In this phase, they begin to communicate simply in writing using a small range of familiar words.</td>
<td>Learners at this phase are new to writing, although they understand that print conveys messages.</td>
<td>Learners at the beginning of this phase understand some basic purposes for writing, initiate writing for their own purposes and communicate their ideas and experience simply through writing, drawing or copying. In this phase, they experiment with common classroom text types with varying grammatical accuracy. First language influence is still evident in text organisation and language features.</td>
<td>Learners at the beginning of this phase reproduce basic models of most classroom text types, but not at the expected levels of the achievement standards. In this phase, they can write a variety of texts in different curriculum areas with some accuracy in text features, organisation and cohesion, provided that this has been adequately modelled by the teacher.</td>
<td>Learners at the beginning of this phase can produce a range of types of texts for different purposes on a range of topics, demonstrating knowledge of the topic and control of text structures and key grammatical features. In this phase, they begin to approximate the writing of native speakers, although grammatical inconsistencies and influence of first language are still evident in their writing.</td>

Students:
- may communicate ideas through drawings, symbols and early writing attempts, and produce and copy symbols, letters, words, labels, lists and sentences
- draw pictures in a sequence to tell or retell simple stories or a sequence of actions
- show awareness that speech can be written down and know the difference between writing and drawing
- begin to demonstrate awareness that certain letters in English represent certain sounds, with a growing understanding of sound–letter relationships, and identify some letters in words, including those in their own name
- may use inconsistent letter formation and may mix upper- and lower-case letters
- learn to use the basic concepts of print in English, including left-to-right directionality, spaces between words and return sweep
- make use of classroom models to reproduce letters, words and short sentences
- contribute ideas, words or sentences to class or group shared texts, or dictate sentences about a drawing or experience for others to scribe.

Students:
- are beginning to understand the directionality of English print
- begin to differentiate between numbers and letters
- represent letters as images rather than as symbols, and so letters may be poorly or inconsistently formed
- need to be taught how to use ICT independently
- may have little or no experience with pencil and paper, and may have difficulty with pencil grip
- may have difficulty setting out writing clearly and organising work in their exercise books
- begin to recognise simple punctuation, differentiate between this and letters, and attempt to use this when copying written text.

Students:
- write simple sequenced texts (with explicit instruction) about topics of personal interest and for a number of school purposes, including recounting an event, writing a simple description or a set of instructions
- engage in joint shared writing, both as observers and participants, offering some ideas and options
- follow text models for text structure and some language patterns (eg a long time ago …)
- tend to use speech-like sentence structures based on simple repetitive patterns (eg I play … I go to lunch … I go home …), and may use drawings and diagrams to scaffold their communication
- use mainly familiar vocabulary, including articles (a, the), a narrow range of prepositions (on, in), common conjunctions (and) and a narrow range of adverbs (very)
- use grammatical features that are variable and can include run-on sentences, varying levels of subject–verb agreement, tense consistency and phrases of time and place
- increasingly use standard English spelling patterns and demonstrate knowledge of some sound–letter relationships and common sight words
- use basic punctuation to separate ideas (eg full stops, question marks, capital letters)
- continue to use formulaic expressions when writing.

Students:
- plan and write conventional texts, including informative texts and imaginative texts, sequencing information for specific types of texts, such as information reports
- present information appropriately (eg diagram, graph)
- show understanding of the structure and function of paragraphs, including topic sentences
- use a number of common conjunctions and relative pronouns to combine simple sentences into compound and complex sentences
- use pronoun reference with noun/pronoun agreement (eg Mary … she … her)
- use appropriate time sequencing (eg first, next, finally)
- use subject–verb agreement with some accuracy
- use present and past tense verbs, although they may overgeneralise past tense endings (eg drunk, bought)
- use an expanding vocabulary, including subject-specific vocabulary, and select suitable words to enhance descriptions (eg huge instead of big)
- edit with growing success to enhance fluency, accuracy and readability, and present their writing appropriately in print and electronic forms
- continue to use their first language and previous learning experiences as they develop an understanding of the differences in text types and linguistic features between first language and English in order to construct texts
- participate in shared writing, brainstorming and conferencing as pre- and post-writing activities
- engage in planning and writing, accessing vocabulary and spelling knowledge to edit their own work.

Students:
- use text models to assist with text structure and sources to provide essential content information
- plan their writing with particular audiences in mind
- use some formulaic expressions (eg I will now discuss …) and employ structural features such as headings and subheadings
- are beginning to use phrases of time at the beginning of sentences to foreground particular elements of the text (eg At the beginning of the year …), and use the passive voice as part of science reporting (eg The leaf was put in the sun … rather than We put the leaf in the sun …)
- demonstrate control over grammatical features such as tenses, different types of verbs, phrases of time and place, compound and complex sentences, and pronoun reference
- demonstrate a growing vocabulary, including technical vocabulary, for creating texts in a range of learning areas, and are beginning to understand how vocabulary choice is linked to the tenor of the texts (eg abdomen, stomach, belly)
- employ a range of modal elements and a small range of evaluative vocabulary in evaluative texts, and are becoming aware of the cultural sensitivities associated with certain words (eg a fat man)
- edit for accuracy of content, text structure, spelling and grammatical correctness.
